Help Prevent Stormwater Pollution

The Environmental Health and Safety department is raising awareness about campus stormwater, surface water that accumulates after a rainfall and flows off campus buildings, walkways and streets into storm drains. Polluted stormwater runoff can have harmful effects on wildlife and the recreational uses of streams, creeks and beaches. Campus stormwater can put Avila Beach at harm, potentially contributing to beach closures. The Cal Poly community plays an integral role in preventing this stormwater pollution and keeping campus stormwater runoff clean. Employees can prevent stormwater pollution by being mindful of discharges that cause stormwater pollution including trash, food waste, oil and grease, landscape chemicals, pet waste and detergents.

In Memoriam

Cal Poly’s oldest alumnus, Harry K. Wolf of Morro Bay, died Jan. 15, a couple of weeks shy of his 108th birthday. Wolf may have been the oldest active radio amateur in the U.S. — since 1936, you could find him on air daily. Born in 1909 in Paso Robles, Wolf’s lifelong passions included teaching and amateur radio. After he got his ham ticket, he held the call sign W6NKT for his entire life. Wolf attended Cal Poly from 1927-29, majoring in electrical engineering. He earned his bachelor’s degree at North Arizona State Teachers College in 1933, master’s degree in 1941 and doctorate in 1962. While serving in the U.S. Navy during World War II, he taught navigation to cadets training at Cal Poly. Wolf was instrumental in establishing the Electronics Engineering Department and taught at Cal Poly and Cal Poly Pomona for 31 years, retiring in 1973 as a professor emeritus. He published his autobiography, “The Oak Tree,” in 2009. Wolf was the founding advisor of the Cal Poly Amateur Radio Club. He signed the club’s original charter in 1947. At 103, Wolf attended the dedication of CPARC’s 72-foot antenna tower, which enables students, faculty and community members to send and receive radio signals worldwide.
