Cal Poly Receives CSU-Record $110M Gift from Alumnus William L. Frost

Demonstrating unprecedented support for the nation's largest public university system and specifically for undergraduate research, CSU alumnus William and Linda Frost have given a CSU-record $110 million to Cal Poly's College of Science and Mathematics. The gift is among the largest ever to public higher education in California. The Frosts' generosity will transform science and mathematics education by greatly enhancing the resources for undergraduate research. A new interdisciplinary research center will contain almost 18,000 square feet of science and mathematics facilities. In addition, the Frosts' donation includes $3.6 million annually to support student scholarships and research stipends, cutting-edge equipment and instrumentation, and expanded hiring of instructors, giving faculty members more time to mentor undergraduate students in research. "Bill and Linda's gift will impact the lives of countless Cal Poly students, right now and far into the future," President Armstrong said. In developing a new vision for the university's undergraduate science and mathematics academic and research program, Bill Frost worked closely with College of Science and Mathematics Dean Phil Bailey. While designing the program, they concentrated on how to create the most positive and lasting impact on students. By enhancing undergraduate research experiences, the program will enrich students' experience and make them top prospects for graduate schools and professional careers. "I see this as an investment in the education and future successes of our science and mathematics students," said Bill Frost. "I want this funding to be used to further enhance the Learn by Doing experiences that define Cal Poly and to provide students with research opportunities that will result in their presenting at regional, national and even international professional conferences and co-authoring publications with their faculty mentors in peer-reviewed journals."

Center for Service in Action Receives National Make a Difference Day Award

The Center for Service in Action has received a 2017 Make a Difference Day national award and, in turn, selected El Camino Homeless Organization (ECHO) in Atascadero as the recipient of a $10,000 award donation. Tegna Inc. announced the winners and provided the donation along with its partner, Arby's Foundation. Cal Poly was one of 14 organizations nationwide to receive the award. "I am honored that our Center for Service in Action has been recognized for its positive work in our community," said Jason Mockford, director of Leadership and Service at Cal Poly.

Cal Poly Named One of America's Best Value Colleges for 2017

Forbes magazine has once again named Cal Poly as one of America's Best Value Colleges. Cal Poly was the seventh best value among California public universities and ranked 73rd overall among all U.S. schools. In determining the list, the magazine sought to provide high school students and their families a list of schools that offer the most value for the dollar. The 2017 Best Value College ranking indexes 300 schools that deliver the best bang for the tuition buck based on tuition costs, school quality, post-grad earnings, student debt and graduation success.

Cal Poly Pier in Avila Beach to Open to Tours on May 6

Community members are invited to bring the whole family and tour the Cal Poly Pier in Avila Beach from 9 a.m. to noon on Saturday, May 6. The spring open house will feature hands-on touch tanks full of live marine creatures, microscopes for viewing ultra-small sea creatures, and many more interactive displays. Kids can put their face in the water and breathe through a scuba respirator, learn why whales migrate and find out what a "red tide" is. Professors and students will be available to answer questions. Guests may tour the displays at their own pace and explore ongoing research into local marine life, including projects aimed at protecting Morro Bay's ecosystem, sustaining local fisheries, and mapping ocean currents on the Central Coast. For more information, call ext. 6-6777. Rain will cancel the event.
